Charm city kings full movie amazon prime

Finding the best family movies on Amazon Prime is hard. Not only do kids sections print more TV than movies, some of the movies in that section are... Well... it's not that good. They're either mindless neon pablum aimed at a journey-young crowd, or they're movies that are pretty damn old (a 1970's movie can be a hard sell with kids). So we've done a job combing through Prime Video to find things that parents can watch with kids of all ages, from 6 years old to mid-teens. Best streaming devices in 2020All of amazon's best movies and shows In addition to mpaa ratings, we've also included Common Sense Media ratings for each movie. The group is highly respected when it comes to helping parents find a suitable film for their particular family. We ordered films by increasing age proposals, starting with 6 or more Ernst & Celestine and climaxing films better for teenagers. Ernest & Celestine(Image credit: GKids)Oscar nomination for best animated feature, Ernest & Celestine's best film Prime Video for younger children. Not only are his stories about unusual friends - bear (Ernest) and mouse (Celestine) aren't most likely pals, especially since they meet when they first try to literally eat the second - but Ernest & Celestine isn't your average finely animated movie. The pair became dense as thieves by actually robbing a patisserie. Her obsession with art, though, and his dream of becoming an entertainer, are a strong struggle. There's a fantastic cast of voice actors, starting with Forest Whitaker as Ernest and Mackenzie Foy as Celestine. Other stars include Lauren Bacall, William H. Macy and Paul Giamatti, while also zany married duo Megan Mullally and Nick Offerman get the lines in Common Sense Media ratings: aged 6 and upRotten Tomatoes: 97%MPAA Rating: PGWatch nowHow to train a dragon (Image credit: Dreamworks)Top rated (by Rotten Tomatoes) movie on this list, How to Train Your Dragon is probably the best film that comes from dreamworks animation. HTTYD stars Jay Baruchel as the voice of Hiccups, an awkward teen who tries to get the hang of flying with a toothless dragon. Beautifully animated, featuring an excellent supporting cast of voice actors (including Gerard Butler, Craig Ferguson, America Ferrera, Jonah Hill and Kristen Wiig), How to Train Your Dragon's Heart can surprise many, and it might be owed to the fact it's an adaptation of Cressida Cowell's popular children's book. Both hilarious and mysterious, How to Train Your Dragon is one of the best family movies on Amazon Prime Video, for good reason: it keeps everyone on their site. Common Sense Media rating: age 7 and upRotten Tomatoes: 99%MPAA Rating: PGWatch nowRango (Image credit: Paramount Pictures) The titular lizard Rango (voiced by Johnny Depp) is a chameleon with problems in the form of one thing he really wants to be: a hero. But life has a way of pushing Rango into the role of his destiny. Somehow Finds himself in a weird town called Dirt, which is basically like a version of the Wild West, but with all the creepy and rambling cast, instead of people. Rango looks to become law like Sheriff Dirt, but local politics over water supplies and a massive treacherous snake stand in his way. Oh, and that snake has a gatling gun, which makes it extra dangerous. Far more sophisticated than the average animated story, Rango comes from respected director Gore Verbinski, and has earned comparisons to Chinatown of all films. Kids may not even realize it, but parents who were looking for a great movie to share with their family will. Common Sense Media rating: aged 9 and upRotten Tomatoes: 88%MPAA Rating: PGWatch nowThe Adventures of Tintin (Image credit: Paramount Pictures)One of the more iconic graphic novels - and one that never really got the right adaptation - Belgian cartoonist Hergé tintin books are full of wonder and travel the world, making them perfect for the big screen. So, of course, it took titan level Steven Spielberg to bring the journey of the titular journalist, his adorable dog Snowy and curmudgeonly Captain Archibald Haddock to life. This animated CGI adventure will definitely make younger kids ooh and ah in wonder, thanks to a whimsical aesthetic and Spielberg's knack for creating events that are accessible to all. Parents and older siblings will hear the top-tier voice of the acting cast, which includes Jamie Bell (Tintin) Daniel Craig (Ivan Ivanovitch Sakharine), Nick Frost and Simon Pegg (Thomson and Thompson) and Andy Serkis (Haddock). Common Sense Media rating: aged 9 and upRotten Tomatoes: 74%MPAA Rating: PGWatch nowToday best Amazon Prime dealsCaptain America: The First Avenger (Image credit: Disney/Marvel Studios) A story of nobility and heroism where even the least athletic can become a hero, Captain America: The First Avenger is one to watch Prime while you still can. That's because now that we have Disney Plus, there's no telling how long Prime Video will have this movie (as well as another selection on our list). Chris Evans fills the dual-role he is asked to play - as both scrawny, pre-super serum Steve Rogers and carved Captain America - both aspects. You will root for him as an underdog and then admire his selflessness during the struggles that take up the rest of the film. Evans is supported by a strong cast, including Hayley Atwell as Peggy Carter and Sebastian Stan as Bucky Barnes. The film isn't your traditional modern action movie either, carrying a steady pace that makes it feel more like a standalone movie than the eye-pieces in the Marvel Cinematic Universe that would soon germinate from its roots. However, it does have all the bangs and punches and calamities it takes to get a PG-13 rating. Common Sense Media review: aged 11 and upRotten Tomatoes: 80%MPAA Rating: PG-13Watch nowThe Avengers (Image credit: Disney/Marvel Studios)If your kids love Cap's first adventure, then let him watch it travel to the modern And try to fit into Nick Fury's team of baddie-fighting superheroes. Here, Cap is brought out of the iciest mothballs when an alien force threatens humanity, running rough over New York. Yes, here we see the Avengers Initiative first gather, with Robert Downey Jr. as Tony Stark/Iron Man, Chris Hemsworth as Thor, Scarlett Johansson as Black Widow and Mark Ruffalo as Bruce Banner/Hulk. The film is built around dysfunctional group dynamics as heroes get in their way when Loki (Tom Hiddleston) steals powerful gear and looks to put the world on its head. Joss Whedon directs, and while this film may get a little grim and mourning, its touch of levity is for a movie that many families will have together. Common Sense Media rating: aged 13 and upRotten Tomatoes: 92%MPAA Rating: PG-13Super 8 (Picture credit: Paramount Pictures) Film and TV champions J.J. Abrams and Steven Spielberg directed and produced (respectively) this fantastic piece of family friendly science fiction and fantasy. Meant to harken retro nostalgia vibes (like Stranger Things, but a little more natural), Super 8 focuses on a group of kids during the late 70's in a small Ohio town who happen to come across the supernatural while shooting a movie on a Super 8 camera. Your kids might ask: Why simply use an iPhone? and you can explain to them how back in your day, the movie had to be developed before it was seen. Elle Fanning leads a strong cast of lesser known child actors, while veteran actors Kyle Chandler and Noah Emmerich provide some adult oversight. If your child may not like the occasional jump-scare science fiction, you may want to wait. Common Sense Media ratings: aged 13 and upRotten Tomatoes: 81%MPAA Rating: PG-13Watch nowFighting with My Family (Image credit: Universal Pictures) The real-life story of former WWE champion Paige comes to life in the wonderfully-told Merchant Stephen movie Fight With My Family. Florence Pugh stars as Paige, who came from a rough and tumble childhood to reach superstardom. While Pugh adds a lot of charisma to Paige, the film is owned by Nick Frost and Lena Headey, who play her parents, and Jack Lowden, who plays her brother Zak. While Paige has it, Zak doesn't, and his frustration with being told he won't be making it proves for the emotional gripping of cinema. On the road, though, training at the WWE, Paige faces her own stumbling block when she doesn't fit in, and the talent coach (played by Vince Vaughn) has a hard time turning her into the next champion she becomes.Common Sense Media review: age 13 and upRotten Tomatoes: 93%MPAA Rating: PG-13Watch nowThe Big Sick (Image credit: Amazon Studios)OK, this might be a stretch, given its R-rating, but Common Sense Media is willing to consider the Big Sick as a movie suitable for kids 15 years and older, so we should consider it here. The film covers many complex things, including illness, like Kumail (Nanjiani, playing a character based on his own awareness with co-writer Emily V. Gordon) for Emily (Zoe Kazan), only for her to start fighting a mysterious disease that sends her to the hospital. The film also deals with issues of mixed race couples. Nanjiani's traditional Muslim parents are frustrated with his decision to date a white woman, while Emily's parents (played by Holly Hunter and Ray Romano) have a hard time getting to know Kumail and have some incredibly awkward questions to ask. Common Sense Media review: aged 15 and upRotten Tomatoes: 98%MPAA Rating: RWatch nowMore family movies streamIf Amazon doesn't offer enough family movies for your home, check out our best family movies on Netflix guide, like HBO Max, which has excellent Studio Ghibli movies and content from Looney Tunes and Sesame Street. Of course, there's always Disney Plus, but you already knew about the house mouse's great streaming service, didn't you? You?
